

Short Narrative Essay Example

- Beginning

It was a beautiful, breezy night. We decided to go out for dinner. I was writing an article on my laptop while my other roommates were free when they told me they intended to have dinner outside. I just finished my article and told them to get ready. We left the apartment and realized that the weather was beautiful. We first went to some clothing outlets for window shopping, which was not just window shopping. One of our buddies wanted to buy a birthday present for her handsome hunk. We then went to a restaurant for dinner. The night seemed undoubtedly mesmerizing until we encountered a psychopath in the restaurant.

- Middle

We were so busy conversing and laughing that the person at the following table started murmuring to shut up. We were shocked. One of our mates asked, "Who is he talking to?" To you idiots, he said. This remark made me so anguished that I started arguing with him. "This is a public place. Nobody can shut us up, and the ones having issues with our laughter ought to stay at their homes," I said.

He was constantly using abusive language. It made me even more aggressive. I went to the counter to ask for the manager. I could not find the manager, so I ended up calling him at his number. We told him about the incident and threatened him to take relevant action; otherwise, we would do things on our own. He asked for an apology and assured us that he would talk to the restaurant staff and that person himself. The person was one of their repeat customers; therefore, the servers and staff took his side. The manager told us to wait in the restaurant.

- Climax

Meanwhile, one of my friends called her brother who was a bureaucrat. She told him about the incident. He came to the location right at that time and the manager had also arrived. They both negotiated and decided to talk to that psychopath. They went to him and asked him to apologize.

- Conclusion

He was not ready, but after some threatening words, he got ready to say sorry. He apologized and promised not to misbehave in a public place.

It was the incident when I felt empowered and courageous enough to talk for myself and other girls, and that ended with the person being apologetic to us.
